

Abstract

A method of analysing scale at a location in a hydrocarbon well flow system comprises the steps of: using an in situ gamma-ray detector to obtain a gamma-ray spectrum from said scale, and spectroscopically analysing said spectrum to determine the abundances of radioactive isotopes in said scale.